First Watch Credit Union Warns Members of Fraudulent Calls and Text Messages

First Watch Credit Union is warning members about a recent increase in fraudulent phone calls and text messages targeting credit union members.

Members have reported receiving calls and text messages claiming that First Watch Credit Union's fraud department has detected an attempted or suspicious charge on their account. These communications may appear legitimate and are designed to create a sense of urgency so the recipient will respond quickly.

First Watch Credit Union wants members to know that these messages are fraudulent.

The scammers may attempt to convince members to click a link, call a phone number, verify account information, or provide sensitive financial or personal information. The goal is to gain access to account information, debit card details, passwords, or security codes.

What Should You Do If You Receive One?

If you receive a suspicious text message or phone call claiming to be from First Watch Credit Union:

- Do not click on links in the message.

- Do not reply to the text.
- Do not call a phone number provided in the message.
- Do not provide your account number, debit card information, password, PIN, or security codes.

If you are concerned about a transaction, contact First Watch Credit Union directly using a trusted phone number or contact method.

It is important to remember that scammers can make phone calls and messages appear convincing, including using the name of a financial institution or information that makes the communication seem legitimate.

First Watch Credit Union encourages members to remain vigilant and to report suspicious activity as soon as possible. If you believe you may have provided information to a scammer or interacted with a suspicious message, contact the credit union immediately.

When it comes to your financial information, it is always better to pause, verify, and contact us directly.
